

“When they had finished breakfast, Jesus said to Simon Peter, ‘Simon, son of John, do you love me more than these?’ He said to him, ‘Yes, Lord; you know that I love you.’ Jesus said to him, ‘Feed my lambs.’” (John 21.15)

As I look out the back garden window, everything is green. Winter is but a memory and the air is filled with life. The air is warm and the sun is shining. And the earth is bursting with green buds. Ah, new life; there's nothing like it! Spring has arrived and summer is just around the corner.

The last time we did theological reflection was before the outbreak of the virus. We're now experiencing our third lockdown. Remote learning has become the norm. Of course, hybrid learning is the future and a hybrid of in-person and remote, both options will always have to be available.

A response to 'Feed my lambs.' is to do what we can to ensure that every student can participate in class and school as fully as possible and on as safe a basis as possible for his or her family's financial well-being. We teach our in-person students and our remote students with the same care and attention. We are grateful for the many staff members, brothers and sisters in Christ.

We are grateful for the many staff members, brothers and sisters in Christ who follow all safety protocols, and we get vaccinated as soon as we are able. We pray for each other. We call our loved ones and friends. We reach out to those who live in long-term care homes, loved ones and friends essential workers.

For many of us, there are family and social gatherings and out of country travel plans. We are patient as we wait in line for essential items like groceries. Our athletically minded students can't play school sports because all the leagues are cancelled. As challenging as all this is, we are
